

Free font makes a happy logo

Between articles, we're helping friends to build an orphanage in Uganda. It's a project of extremes—devastating loss, youthful resilience, zero budget, big needs. To tell the story back home, we found Ray Larabie's Sybil Green from MyFonts.com, which conveys a perfect note of cheer, hope and childlike exuberance. A welcome surprise: It's free.

One bouncy line

It looks cartoony at first, but start adding colors and Sybil Green gets cool fast, combining the vibrant, earthy style of African art with a touch of kindergarten. Nudging letters up and down adds kidlike bounce. We like that its letters are stackable, too (right), which makes for many kinds of expressive, useful configurations.

SYBIL GREEN

Rick and the gang in Kabale (Right)

Amidst appalling need, kids really are still kids; all it takes is a little shelter.

Stackable letters! Versatile lettering is a big help when time and money are limited. Stacked and overlapped, Sybil Green's ziggy lines, colors, and filled-in shapes are their own artwork, all by themselves yielding a happy, engaging look without photos or other embellishments.
